Invitation to the Fifth Training Course 2000

We, Tokai University School of Medicine and the New Health Leader Network, with the collaboration of the World Health Organization Regional Office for the Western Pacific (WHO-WPRO), invite you to the fifth training course entitled "Health Development Beyond 2000-Training Course for Future Health Leaders".

This training course has been held once a year since 1996 and forty-one fellows have been awarded the course certificate. They are from many areas of the world including Republic of Albania, People's Republic of Bangladesh, Kingdom of Cambodia, People's Republic of China, Republic of the Fiji Islands, Republic of Indonesia, Republic of Korea, Lao People's Democratic Republic, Mongolia, Papua New Guinea, Kingdom of Thailand, Socialist Republic of Viet Nam. Each fellow studied hard and participated in discussions on new sciences in the field of public health for 4 weeks. They are back in their own responsibilities in their own position; the director or administrator of the Health and Welfare Ministries, the director of the national hospitals and so on.

As the ultimate goal of public health is to bring up the world to the level where everyone can live healthily to fulfill his or her life, the purposes of this course are to increase the latest knowledge of health problems, risk assessment and bioforecasting technology, and to demonstrate how new strategies and methodologies can be applied in solving health problems. We expect that the participants finally acquire the ability of the health policy making.

It is our honor that this course comes to be highly regarded and we could have the well-qualified people as the fellows for the course. One of the delightful results of the course is that some fellows, who participated in a former course, participated in the next course as a lecturer. Since this course is held by non-governmental organization, their cooperation is one of the driving and crucial forces for it. We hope to continue our global challenges for the 21st century.

Course Objectives

Spirit of this course

Social, economic and political changes are expanding at a very fast pace throughout the world. In many countries these changes, together with demographic changes such as urbanization and aging of populations, have been influencing an emerging future health situation which will be vastly different from those in the past and the present. In addition the world is seeing an epidemiologic shift where lifestyle related diseases are becoming one of the problems and rapid technological advances which will modify health interventions in the future. The spirit of this course is "The Forecast for Health Development in the Future".

Health professionals

Health professionals of the future, especially those who specialize in public health, will have to take leadership in order to ensure that emerging challenges to health are met effectively. Planners, policy makers and managers of health systems must be able to detect, identify, make judgements and make forecast of health conditions and requirements of the future. This will enable them to ensure quality, effectiveness, efficiency and continuity of health services in the 21st century.

Educational programme

Futuristic approach, prospective study, and improved action for the resource effectiveness on health quality and equity have not been included in conventional public health education. Educational programme consists of 5 modules: Introductory module; Problem identification and issues analysis; Health technology assessment; Approaches and health intervention; and Health systems reform. This programme was prepared in collaboration with the WHO Regional Office for the Western Pacific(WPRO). The main educational method to be used in the course/seminar will be problem-based or priority-oriented teaching and learning. Lectures and discussions in the former courses were evaluated using SWOT (Strengths, Weaknesses, Opportunities, Threats) analysis. Lessons from the course experience are very useful for the improvement of situation and preventive measure for difficulty and problem. To achieve these, work and discussions will be carried out in plenary or in small groups(4-5 per group) as well as by individuals.

Primary goal and improvement of the course

The primary goal is to build new multi-disciplinary skills and abilities to meet requirements of health in the future and conductivity of future health-related actions and new priority in the fellows' home countries. Every year the International Symposium on some specified theme is held, and its contents have been published since 1996. This year we will celebrate the fifth anniversary at the International Symposium..The curriculum of The course is drawn up with the consultation from WHO-WPRO. This year, it is planned to have lectures from WHO, Geneva after the lecture of computer training through the internet. It is also planned to increase the time of discussion and develop the computer training course for the skilled.

Qualification for application

Senior national or local level health officials with present or potential responsibility for the formulation and promotion of health policies as well as the designing and implementation of programmes. In addition to fellows from government researchers, managers and trainers in the institutions, graduate students will be considered in 2000. The upper age limit is 45, but exceptions will be considered on a case by case basis. Applicants should have a sufficient command of spoken and written English, and also be in good health, both physically and mentally, to undergo the training.
